Essentials

This chart represents the collection of responses to “Never cut in line.” Be respectful is the definite favorite, however, there is a strong safety reason for this one. Picture an event with a large gathering of people. What would happen if we didn’t organize ourselves into a line? People start to push, shove, argue, and eventually fights break out.

Mrs. Wilkison's 6th graders experience a conversation with students from Mobile, Alabama. The students were in a building of about 900 and from a district of 90,000 students. However, the issues and questions were very similar to what LMS students wanted to know as well. It was a meet and greet session for about 30 minutes where students asked each other questions about their school day, activities, and rules. Good communication skills were a must as interruptions and side conversations would make it very difficult to listen.
